Meet Nolan

Lisa was 24 weeks into her pregnancy when her high blood pressure triggered a round of tests with a grim diagnosis: HELLP syndrome, a very rare complication of pregnancy where the only effective treatment is delivery. Lisa and her husband welcomed their son, Nolan Irish, into the world through an emergency C-section. Nolan weighed only 1 pound 2 ounces.

Nolan was admitted into the NICU at The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital, where he fought courageously for his life. He spent the first two months in an incubator and on a ventilator. Nolan received steroid treatments for his lungs and had to have his blood gases checked numerous times a day, but demonstrated strength and determination that impressed his nurses and doctors.

When Nolan was almost two months old, he pulled his ventilator tube out and rapidly improved from there. Nolan's parents were invited to take him home on June 21, exactly one week before his due date.

Today Nolan is a small boy with a huge presence. Having conquered huge odds as a baby, Nolan embraces life and its biggest challenges: He is currently working with neighborhood friends to dig a hole to China through the backyard.

About The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital at Maine Medical Center

The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital at Maine Medical Center, Maine's only Children's Hospital is a non-profit organization benefiting from generous community support. From routine check-ups and immunizations to the treatment of life-threatening illnesses and injuries, the hospital offers comprehensive, family-centered healthcare for all of northern New England. With 109 beds, including a 51 bed Level III NICU, it is Maine's premier referral hospital, offering services not available elsewhere in the state. Our hospital was rated the fourth safest hospital in the U.S. and our nurses were recently rated in the top 3% world-wide for nursing excellence.

About Children's Miracle Network

In 1991, The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital became a Children's Miracle Network (CMN) Hospital, serving children and their families from all over Northern New England. CMN is a nonprofit international alliance of premier pediatric hospitals dedicated to saving and improving the lives of children by raising funds for life-saving equipment, charity care and cutting-edge research. The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital at Maine Medical Center is one of the 170 CMN hospitals providing the finest care and community outreach to millions of children with diseases and injuries of every kind. Since 1999 local Walmart and Sam's Club's have raised over $2.2 million for The Barbara Bush Children's Hospital at Maine Medical Center.
